TURNING POINT FOR U. N.?

THE UNITED Nations General Assembly decision to organize a "police force" to restore and keep peace in the Suez area was a historic event. If Britain's overt action against Egypt has accomplished anything worthwhile, this is it. This may have the additional advantage of being able to set a precedent for international action, an project their personalities. Such girls even-more important precedent than the action in Korea-which really was a United States affair.

It would be foolish, of course, to pin too much hope on such a police force. It could never be effective in actions against major world powers, such as against Russia in Hungary, because that would involve fight- are of little value whereas teachers, ing on a scale that would quickly become nurses, stenographers, etc., are essential World War III.

But if this matter spurs the creation of a force to police the "little wars," it may have accomplished what years of debate failed to do.

Britain's and France's moves were morally indefensible. But as a practical matter, this has put the issue up to the U. N. to do what it was originally organized to do -keep the peace. If, in addition, it results in an arrangement by which the Suez Canal can be kept free from nationalistic control by Nasser, then a further benefit to the West and Free World will be a fact.

POLLSTERS' PREDICTIONS

PRESIDENTIAL election forecasting, which gained some acclaim back in the settled twenties when the now defunct Literary Digest reflected pronouncedly Republican trends, got a black eye when that magazine's samplings forecast the "election" of Landon in 1936.

Another breed then came along—the scientific pollster. He did pretty well until 1948, when the electorate laid the axe right across his neck. Since then the scientific analyst has been more cautious. All pollsters are now trying harder to get their findings direct from the grassroots.

Almost unanimously they agreed on what they heard—the reelection of President Eisenhower. Some of them, however, laughs. # Feed Survey Committee Issues Report On 1956 Prospects

Pickaway County farmers can obtain experienced advice and up-to-date literature on their farming problems at the County Extension Office located in the Post Office Building, S. Court St., Circleville. The office here is the link between district farmers and the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.

Small decreases in numbers of hogs and chickens to be raised, increases in broilers and turkeys, and little or no change in laying flocks, dairy and beef cattle are in prospect for the forthcoming feeding year. Livestock and poultry will have more than ample supplies of grains and low-protein

These were the findings of a 24-member college feed survey committee after completion of an intensive study in Chicago. The committee, sponsored by the American Feed Manufacturers association, has been conducting similar studies every year since 1941. E. W. Klosterman of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station, was a committee member this year.

Dividing its report by classes of livestock and poultry, the feed survey committee forecast:

Swine-This fall's pig crop will be 7 percent less than that of a year ago. Average slaughter weight of all hogs marketed in the 1956-57 feeding year will be 236 pounds heavier than in 1955-56.

Feed Survey Committee Issues Report On 1956 Prospects

Pickaway County farmers can obtain experienced advice and up-to-date literature on their farming problems at the County Extension Office located in the Post Office Building, S. Court St., Circleville. The office here is the link between district farmers and the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.

Small decreases in numbers of hogs and chickens to be raised, increases in broilers and turkeys, and little or no change in laying flocks, dairy and beef cattle are probably will increase slightly. in prospect for the forthcoming feeding year. Livestock and poultry will have more than ample supplies of grains and low-protein

These were the findings of a 24-member college feed survey committee after completion of an intensive study in Chicago. The committee, sponsored by the American Feed Manufacturers association, has been conducting similar studies every year since 1941. E. W. Klosterman of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station, was a committee member this year.

Dividing its report by classes of livestock and poultry, the feed survey committee forecast:

Swine-This fall's pig crop will be 7 percent less than that of a year ago. Average slaughter weight of all hogs marketed in the 1956-57 feeding year will be 236 pounds heavier than in 1955-56.

Poultry-The nation's laying flock will be slightly larger dueing the 1956-57 feeding year. There will be a slight decrease in number of chickens raised for flock replacement, but a considerable increase in numbers of both broilers and turkeys raised.
